To Whom it May Concern:

Between the dates of March 12, 2007 and November 7, 2008 Nikodemus Siivola was engaged as a subcontractor of Clozure Associates, working as a software engineer for our most important client. His responsibilities included original contributions to the client's application – a large-scale web service – as well as supporting and extending their chief development tool, Steel Bank Common Lisp (SBCL).

Nikodemus's performance was exemplary throughout this engagement. His technical work was top notch, showing both attention to detail and creativity. His communication skills were also excellent. Finally, his client management skills were excellent. He showed flexibility, responsiveness, and follow-through in all of his interactions with Clozure Associates as well as our client.

I would recommend him for future jobs without reservation.

Sincerely,

Andrew Shalit
